

STEPHEN PRATT

SYMPHONIES OF TIME AND TIDE for orchestra

Symphonies of Time and Tide was written to be performed during the composer's 70th birthday year and is dedicated to members of the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra and its remarkable chief conductor, Vasily Petrenko. Despite the title, it is a single-movement work, conceived as a whole, with a somewhat traditional symphonic shape underpinning the seven sections. Listeners should have little difficulty in identifying, in particular, a light and jazzy section (III), a 'slow movement' (IV and V) and a 'finale' (VI) and 'coda' (VII).
